DIRECTOR'S NOTE

When I was lucky enough to be asked back to direct a second show with Westfield Summer Stage, I searched for a play that was as entertaining and heartfelt as last summer's Mamma Mia. We quickly decided on High School Musical, as its message is as relevant today as it was when the show premiered on Disney Channel: be brave, be kind, be you, and whatever you do, don't stick to the status quo!

Yes, this show has plenty of corny cliches and catchy songs (you love them, you know you do), but it also touches on so many themes that high schoolers still face today. These characters struggle with finding their identity, building self confidence, and facing their fears head on. Gabriella and Troy are surrounded by friends, but still feel alone and unfulfilled. They are looked at as too young to know what they really want, yet also feel unable to explore untapped potential. Together, by choosing to audition for the Spring musical, they make the decision to stand out from the crowd and follow their passions.

I have loved watching this talented cast explore how they choose to express their characters throughout the rehearsal process. Their beautiful voices and energetic dancing remind me of all those amazing memories I have of auditioning, rehearsing, and performing in high school. I hope you see characters that remind you of people you went to high school with, or even yourself! I'm inspired by this cast's talent, as well as their determination and focus to learn this show in three weeks. This has been an unbelievably fast process, but the experience has been nothing but rewarding and fulfilling. Thank you, Westfield Summer Stage, for inviting me back to collaborate with this incredible theatre community. Cast, break a leg, and.....

GET'CHA HEAD IN THE GAME!
